

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

-25-

A system, device, and method for receiver access control in an internet television system uses a push mechanism to distribute access control information from a distribution device to an access device. The access device uses the access control information to make receiver access control decisions for a subsequently received request from a host to join a television channel multicast group.

5